Sengketa Laut Tiongkok Selatan: Ancaman Bagi Komunitas Keamanan ASEAN?

Abstract

A lack of unity among ASEAN members often referred as failure of security community progress in ASEAN. This research analyzes three components of security community in the context of the South China Sea dispute. In accordance with Karl Deutch’s security community theory, there are three things that considered to build security community: (1) talks about possibility of war; (2) the allocation of resources to build military power, and (3) acceptance and obedience to certain rules and agreements. This paper argues that South China Sea dispute interfered ASEAN to build security community. First, the issue disrupts efforts to spread ASEAN’s norms. Secondly, the situation has interfered conflict prevention. Third, the differences attitude of ASEAN members caused difficulty to establish a conflict resolution mechanism within ASEAN.
