Abstract

Schizophrenia is well-known as disorder with bad tendency to be totally recovered on average. Whenschizophrenics have to be returned to home, there are new challenges which make people with schizophrenia have to survive in their uncertainly new life. Therefore it's important to schizophrenia search for meaning in their life remembering the importance of meaning in life for every human being. Schizophrenic people implicitly keep their recovered state and minimize relapse tendency by searching valuable things in life. This research purposed is to know how meaning in life post-hospitalization schizophrenic. Meaning in life in this research is realizing about the presence of chance and possibility based on fact or realizing what people potentially do in certain situation. Subject in this research is two persons with schizophrenic who has been hospitalized in Rumah Sakit Jiwa Menur, Surabaya, for one month and returned to home based on doctor's recommendation. Subjects age ranged between 25-45 years old and have been home for at least 5 months. In depth interview used as main method in this research to get informations with the schizophrenic, interview with subject's family is necessary to get additional information. This Research results that two subjects have different meaning in life. First subject is in good progress to reach his meaning in life by doing everything he could to get better wealth, even in his bad economystatus, for his beloved wife and child. In second subject, he sees his life as ordinary life and feels nothing is necessary to be changed. He is less processing to reach his meaning in life, but he find a meaningful state when he is with his friends. This differences are caused by role and subject's status because its effect to responsibility, and caused also by schizophrenia type.
