Abstract

Democratic idea in the Arab World has been replanted in the government after a series of popular uprising which happened spontaneously as a response to economic and political crisis. The Arab Uprising in the Middle East and North Africa in 2011 has become an important moment from democratization process. The downfall of authoritarian regimes in Tunisia, Egypt, Libya, and Yemen by the movement of popular uprising has made those countries entered transition phase from authoritarian into another form of government. Variable analysis used are "good old time of order", "social peace" and "respect for authority". A phenomenon that occurs in four Arab countries and Indonesia will be analyzed in this paper to determine the direction of a country's political transition toward democratization process and that led to the civil war.
